Tom Riekel returned this week from Los Angeles, where he visited his daughter, Mrs. Ginsburg, and Mike himself, and also called on Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Brown. He says Mike's health isn't so good out there and he wants him to move back here with his wife and little son; and Mike is almost persuaded.

W. E. Brosa has leased his Doney Park farm and left with Mrs. Brosa for Orland, Calif., where they lived before they came here. Mrs. Brosa's health has been bad since she had the flu, and they are making the change in the hope that it will prove beneficial to her. The lessee of the ranch is Mr. Williams, a brother-in-law of Bob Carroll, who has been living with the latter in Doney Park. Mr. Brosa expects to buy a small farm in California.

Governor Campbell's mailing list is quite up-to-date. He appointed L. C. Riley and Lee Carron as representative of this county and Navajo county at the southwest conference at Riverside. Mr. Riley hasn't lived here for some time, and Mr. Carron moved here from Holbrook a year or more ago. This nullifies two of the dozen or so appointments the governor made from the counties other than Maricopa, the latter county getting 70 delegates.

The First Requisite of a Family is an Abiding Place

The first requisite of a family is an abiding place, but the place is not necessarily a home. The word cannot be applied to quarters temporarily occupied whether a house or a hotel. A home must be a measure of permanency. The average family that owns a home will say that it will become independent of salary and will establish a permanent buying power that the renting family seldom has.
